(a) Description, nature of the treatment/procedure:

- I. The PRP facial is an advanced skincare treatment method that utilizes the natural components of your own body to improve the health, quality, and radiance of the facial skin. This in-office procedure is a multi-step process requiring a simple blood draw followed by centrifugation to separate platelets from red blood cells. The platelets are then layered over the skin of the face prior to a short microneedling session, allowing for complete absorption of healing and regenerative growth factors. Direct infusion promotes increased collagen and elastin production to support, tighten, and beautify your skin structure and appearance. When applied in combination with microneedling, purified exosomes are able to target areas of inflammation and injury to promote cellular regeneration, boost collagen production, and significantly improve skin quality and complexion.
